

Pini the Punster and the Pun Jar

Pini is a Punster. His father is a Punster. His grandfather is a Punster. His great grandfather was a Punster. His mother is a Punster. His aunts are Punsters. But Pini is the biggest punster of all.

A pun is a kind of joke. A pun makes fun of two words that sound alike but have different meanings. A punster tells a lot of puns. There are many Punsters in Pini's family.

Pini tells many puns. Too many. Dad makes him a pun jar. Puns cost Pini one cent. Pini says that now his puns cost a pretty penny. CLINK! Pini puts a penny in the pun jar.

Pini the Punster and the Pun Jar

Here are some of Pini's puns.
Some you may get now.
Some you will only get when you're all groan.

- My parrot likes to call me names.
But toucan play that game.
- A man had to have his left side cut off.
He's all right now.
- Stairs are always up to something.
- Why can't the bike stand up? It's two-tired.
- Trying to use a broken pencil is pointless.
- Jim was made backwards.
His feet smell and his nose runs.
- I'm very good at sleeping.
I can do it with my eyes closed.
- I wanted to get a new brain.
But I changed my mind.
- Time flies like an arrow.
Fruit flies like a banana.

